Latest Lisa Louise Cooke's Weekly Family History Blog

Whenever Lisa Louise Cooke does a blog presentation, never hesitate as she presents a wealth of expertise with no fees! Tune in this Thursday (today) at 10 a.m. Denver time and you will not be disappointed. Below is the sample agenda that she will cover for Google Books. If you can't join "live," fear not there's a link below for a recorded version conveniently posted for you. There are even links below for viewing past posts and setting an alarm to remind you on your computer. Believe, Lisa Louise Cooke is awesome. I use to study privately virtually for six months with her on how to create GoogleEarth Pro shows before she got too famous and nationally popular and no longer available for a peon like me.

Dear John:

The Google Books name can be a bit deceiving because it also includes free digitized magazines, almanacs, catalogs, city directories and other printed material. And did you know that you can also find newspapers in Google Books?

Try browsing the newspaper collection for yourself:

1. Go to <https://books.google.com>
2. In the search box, type your query. In this example I'll search for the word history.
3. On the search results page, click the Tools button
4. A new menu will appear. Click Any Document and select Newspapers
5. Your search results will be filtered down to only newspapers!
